Gendering dissent

Human rights, gender history and the road to 1989

Robert Brier
2 September 2019

Soviet, Polish, and Czech women were active but sidelined members of pre-1989 dissident groups. This not only kept up conventional gender roles, but shared them with the regimes they were fighting against, a fact concealed by their 'vernacularized' concept of human rights.

Published 2 September 2019

Original in English
First published in L'Homme 2017/1
Downloaded from eurozine.com (https://www.eurozine.com/gendering-dissent/)
© Robert Brier / L'Homme / Eurozine